

The President's Cabinet

Teaching Objectives

This exercise is designed to let students hone their reasoning and memory skills on the President's Cabinet.

Using Reasoning

Before students start the exercise, point out that looking for different words that refer to the same subject area—like schools and education—is one good way to use their reasoning skills to make “an educated guess.”

Later when you are checking this exercise aloud with the class, ask the students what connections they were able to see. They may have noted a reasonable connection between the Secretary of Defense with military forces. Similarly, the Secretary of Education probably has something to do with schools, and the Secretary of Agriculture most likely has a connection to farm income. What other connections did they see?

Answer Key

1 D	6 E	11 H
2 F	7 J	12 I
3 A	8 G	13 N
4 B	9 K	14 O
5 C	10 L	15 M

Honing Memory

After students complete and check their matches, ask them to turn over their papers and see how many of the Secretaries in the President's Cabinet they can remember and write or name.

Ask students to identify (class discussion) what triggers their memory for the positions that they remember. It may be the daily news (for positions like the Secretary of State, the Secretary of Defense, and the Secretary of Veterans Affairs). It may be that one position is different (the Attorney General does not include the word "Secretary"). Perhaps they have some other method of remembering one or more of the Cabinet members. By hearing the way their classmates remember, your students may pick up ideas that will stick with them and help them remember the positions in the President's Cabinet.

Check their memory for Cabinet members again at a later time, perhaps at the end of this class or during the next class.
